

Sarah Ravenhall, MHA, CHES is Executive Director at the New York State Association of County Health Officials (NYSACHO), a nonprofit membership association representing all 58 local health departments in New York State. With over ten years of experience in the field, she has led a diverse array of initiatives in hospital, population health-based and nonprofit membership association settings. Sarah has been recognized by City & State as an honoree on both the Health Power 100 and 40 under 40 lists.

In her role as Executive Director, Sarah is responsible for administration and operational oversight, membership satisfaction, partnership development and utilizing innovative strategies to advance the organizational mission forward. Sarah functions as the organization's lead lobbyist for advocacy and messaging at the State and National level and serves as secretary to NYSACHO's Board of Directors.

Prior to her arrival at NYSACHO, Sarah led the Population Health Improvement Program at Nassau-Suffolk Hospital Council. In this role, Sarah was recruited to identify evidence-based population health strategies, optimize program processes, set program vision, provide oversight of fiscal management and measure program impact.

Sarah lives in Altamont, NY with her husband, son, daughter and dog. She holds great pride in serving as the voice for governmental local public health agencies on both state and national levels with regard to the life-saving impact it has on families and communities worldwide.
