

Sharon L. Stein, MD, FACS, FASCRS, is a colorectal surgeon at MetroHealth Hospitals and Adjunct Professor at Case Western Reserve University (CWRU) School of Medicine. She has served as the President of the Association of Women Surgeons, as Chair of the American College of Surgeons Women in Surgery Committee and on the Executive Council of the American Society of Colon and Rectal Surgeons. She has worked for Medecins Sans Frontieres (Doctors without Borders) as a surgeon in both South Sudan and Haiti.

As an academician, Dr. Stein has published over 150 articles, editorials and chapters on a variety of topics from minimally invasive surgery to diversity in surgery. She has written extensively on minimally invasive surgery, colorectal cancer and enhanced recovery protocols as well as gender disparities in surgery including pay equity, pregnancy in surgery, and intimate partner violence and is the senior author on a landmark trial on coaching. In recognition of her contributions to scholarship, she has been invited to serve as a reviewer for several prestigious journals, to write several book chapters, and has published a book on laparoscopic colectomy. She has delivered over 300 educational programs, invited lectureships and conferences nationally and internationally. She was the first woman to receive an Honorary Fellowship from the Association of Surgeons of Great Britain and Ireland.

Three years ago, Dr. Stein stepped back from full-time clinical work to create leadership and professional development programming for surgeons. Through her program, The Intentional Surgeon, she has facilitated and coached hundreds of surgeons. Her goal is to create a culture of surgery that allows surgeons to learn and grow as communicators, as leaders and surgeons. She truly believes that this will both improve our care of patients and surgeon well-being. She regularly works with Societies and Institutions to deliver professional development content to their staff and trainees. You can catch her podcast "The Intentional Surgeon" via her website or podcast portals.